Frequent flyer? Drink this in.
Your skin will.

The desert may treat your skin better than in-flight cabin air. Humidity in the Sahara? 20-25%. On long-distance, high-altitude flights? As little as 1%. Since the ideal humidity level is around 50%, it's no wonder air travel takes its toll on skin. Depletes moisture, dulls radiance. What thirsty skin needs: immediate and intense hydration. Moisture Surge™ comforts, softens and soothes in a flash. Oil-free.

Formulas boost skin's moisture level to help restore balance. Pump up fine dry lines. For frequent in-flight relief, there's Moisture Surge Face Spray. Turn up the intensity with Moisture Surge Extra Thirsty Skin Relief and Moisture Surge Extra Refreshing Eye Gel. For all skin types, under or over makeup. Dry air = dry skin? Not anymore. Allergy Tested. 100% Fragrance Free.

World's first award to recognise excellence in action sports photography.

In January, the winner of the first-ever international sports photography competition: Red Bull Illume Image Quest, was announced.

Red Bull Illume received more than 7,200 submissions from thousands of photographers both amateur and professional, from over 90 countries.

The photographs were whittled down to just 50: the most exquisite, technical and creative, images, by a panel of image experts, until one winning photograph, in each of the 10 categories, was chosen.

The Red Bull Illume Top 50 will tour as a remarkable exhibition around the world. For details, and to view the winning images in each category: www.redbullillume.com
